

Hon Minister

- Greetings to everyone and team of Multi – choice for the opportunity to bring to the homes of South Africans the day-to-day experience of our gallant health workers.
- Sometimes as citizens we take it for granted and do not recognize the kind of effort and resilience it takes in this time of the pandemic for our health workers, and we want to honor them and say that the nation appreciates your sacrifices. I hope that this documentary will serve to bring to lounges and homes of South Africans the kind of day to day our health workers go through so that we realize that we have contribution to make, not only to save our own lives and the lives of our loved ones but to recognize the sacrifice of the health workers in terms of risking their lives and of their loved ones.
- Health care workers is a daily routine, they go into the clinic and hospital not knowing they will encounter, risk that any given time they will be interacting with people infected with the virus.
- We have lost past 83000 people to it – millions more have recovered in our health facilities, thanks to the effort health care workers.
- On behalf of the ministry of health, government, and many South Africans, we want to thank you for bringing to ordinary South Africans the reality on behind the scenes in our health facilities.

- Kay Ann

- When we first met with Christa we saw rough footage and from that we got a glimpse into something so unique – difficult to get access to front line workers because they are so busy and snowed under.
- This kind of unique access was incredible and extremely important to get out there.
- We are all affected by COVID is it important to get the message out there and humanise what the front-line workers have gone through and commend the film – makers in the absolute story of hope – there is so much hope when you watch this documentary because you realise how fortunate we are as country with a calibre of front – line workers that we have, that is work – class.
- The documentary is laden with truth and exposing what happened to the front – line workers, how it affected them and their patients personally.
- It is a story of hope, leaving the documentary with hope in your heart knowing that we will be able to overcome this disease as a country.

Prof Carim

- This movie is a very stark reminder of the importance of all the prevention methods we need to have in place, stark reminder of the value of vaccines.
- The movie captures what is otherwise a very brutal condition, that makes you suffer that you cannot breathe in isolation – the only people there are the health care workers.
- Conveys that the power of the health care workers, they are not only there to save your life but there for you.
- Seeing it through the lens of being there firsthand – being a fly on the wall watching this happen to someone in your own family and that you know personally. Taking us back to the importance of what is the most fundamental issue in the pandemic – we are all interdependent and depend on each other.

- The documentary brings to the fore the way the general public is getting healed and how our health care workers are interconnected, their lives, their time and their fears, their concerns and their hopes.